Lansing Break Follows Outburst Of Sudden Nervous Fury

(This is the second of a series of articles on the Wilson personality and the break with secretaries, commencing with the last of the series, will deal with Secretary Lansing's policies and the probable effect of the episode from an international, as well as a national, point of view.)

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Glover Cleveland and Woodrow Wilson never got along very well together and once in a while over academic matters at Princeton University the former said of the latter that he was a man of violent temper, time and temperable temper. (This is a somewhat of an understatement.)

The public does not know Mr. Wilson as well as he is known. He is a man of violent temper, time and temperable temper. (This is a somewhat of an understatement.)

He used to be a man of violent temper, time and temperable temper. (This is a somewhat of an understatement.)
